

A sampling of ecumenical and interfaith resources for a just a sustainable food system

Bread for the World has a great track record advocating on hunger issues.

www.bread.org

The Presbyterian Hunger Program includes a strong emphasis on sustainability in its mission.

<https://www.presbyterianmission.org/ministries/compassion-peace-justice/hunger/>

Hazon, the Jewish Lab for Sustainability, includes much food system work.

<https://hazon.org/>

Faith in Food has a section with brief descriptions of food and spirituality in some of the world's religions. <https://faithinfood.wordpress.com/>

The Rev. Nurya Love Parish hosts the pages for Christian Food Movement.

<http://christianfoodmovement.org/>

They include a directory of food ministries.

LOAF is the clever acronym of the British ecumenical Green Christians food initiative.

<http://greenchristian.org.uk/resources/loaf/>

Interfaith Power and Light has a Cool Harvest initiative with many resources.

<https://www.coolharvest.org/>

They include a list of films (which could be updated).

Green Faith used to have good food system resources, but at publication time they were redoing their website and it was impossible to find anything. But it might be worth a try now; google "Repairing Eden."

www.greenfaith.org

Two to check out on Facebook

Beyond Halal <https://www.facebook.com/BeyondHalal/>

Cultivate: Episcopal Food Movement <https://www.facebook.com/EpiscopalFoodMovement/> prepared for the AED triennial, 2019 phinaborgeson@gmail.com